Colville Tribal EOC continues to provide services to tribal members in isolation or quarantine

The Colville Tribal Emergency Operations Center continues to provide services to Colville Tribal members on and close to the reservation who are in quarantine as they await pending test results or as they are in isolation after they receive a positive test result.

Services, which include care packages with items such as cleaning supplies, personal protective equipment, and similar items as well as groceries, personal hygiene items, medicine and more, is free to tribal members in isolation and quarantine.

The intent is to meet the essential needs for tribal members to stay in isolation and quarantine safely.

The Colville Tribal EOC can be reached at 509-634-7350.

The Colville Tribes have also partnered with SAMSHA to participate in Washington Listens, which provides emotional and non-clinical support for those experiencing increased stress during this unprecedented time.

Washington Listens is anonymous, confidential and free.

For emergencies, call 9-1-1.
